A Monk Who Trades

How are options with futures as the underlying settled?

Out of the Money options expire worthless. In the Money options devolve into money as exercised on request.

He is always out of money!

Devolve? Can you explain the term please?

The buy position of an In-the-Money Call or Put Option contract gets converted into buy or sell position in the underlying Futures, respectively.

What if I do not wish to devolve the position into futures?

You always have the option to square off your position any time before expiry of the options contract or give contrary (do not exercise) instruction on option expiry.

Did you know? Devolution of maturity in Options on Futures results into positions in the underlying Futures contracts.
